AEROSPACE ED CORNER

Researchers at NASA's Dryden Flight Research Center in Southern California have built the first stage of the Orion manned spacecraft--a full-scale model. The mock-up craft, which looks like a flying saucer from a 1950s sci-fi movie, is part of a test of the launch abort system. NASA expects that the Orion spacecraft will eventually take astronauts to the moon and maybe even Mars. See previous coverage on the Orion capsule. NASA hopes that an Orion spacecraft will land astronauts on the moon by 2020. You can learn more at:

National HQ is being renovated and offices will be moving to a temporary building sometime between 3 and 15 Dec. During this move, unfortunately, some delays in processing applications may occur because they won't have access to their computers. Please keep this in mind as you send in your new member apps. We will get an official notice about the move and what to expect.
